

BUILDING ON
a rich history

REGENCY
HEIGHTS

— PARK ROYAL —

View of Park Royal looking North, 15th June 1933

Every piece of land has a past and a story to tell.

The history behind the area surrounding Regency Heights is truly intriguing and unique.

An original story

Queens Park Rangers vs Plymouth Argyle

QPR team photograph, early 1900s

*It's been a showground, home to the football club...
Queens Park Rangers.*

The Army used it during the Great War, and the first ever rugby league test match between Great Britain and Australia took place here.

The newly-formed Australia rugby league team on the 'Kangaroo' tour of Great Britain, 1908

University of Cambridge Colleges' Catering Officials' visit to the Guinness factory, Park Royal in 1956

Then, in 1933,
it was transformed into the Park Royal Guinness brewery.

From which flowed countless pints of the legendary black stuff until the gates closed in 2005.

But this wasn't the end, the next exciting chapter is just being written.

Guinness factory at Park Royal, 1950

Guinness factory in 1936, from something small...

...to something more in 1970

Irish Bowling Tourists and the Guinness Bowling Club team at a match, Park Royal, 25th June 1948

Guinness vehicles parked at the factory, 1936

Belgium vs Holland preliminary hockey match at the XIV Olympic Games, 1948

Aerial view of the Guinness factory and sports field, 1991

Outside the Guinness factory, 1990

All aboard the T15 on the Leyland and Atlantean route on Park Royal, 1980

Bus driver John Todman of Park Royal, 1966

The land that's helping grow an economy

Park Royal Station, Piccadilly Line

The ground that played such a key part in London's past is now integral to the city's future.

It's part of the Old Oak and Park Royal Development, the UK's largest regeneration project, which covers 640+ hectares across three London boroughs.

It will contribute £7 billion to the UK economy every year, create 65,000 new jobs, build 25,500 new homes and provide access to two new 'super hub' railway stations.

All trains to Uxbridge on the Piccadilly Line

Ealing Common Station, Piccadilly Line

*The project will breathe even more life into London,
with its thriving communities.*

Bustling neighbourhoods offering a wealth of amenities,
educational institutions, sport & leisure facilities,
green spaces and more.

Turnham Green, Chiswick

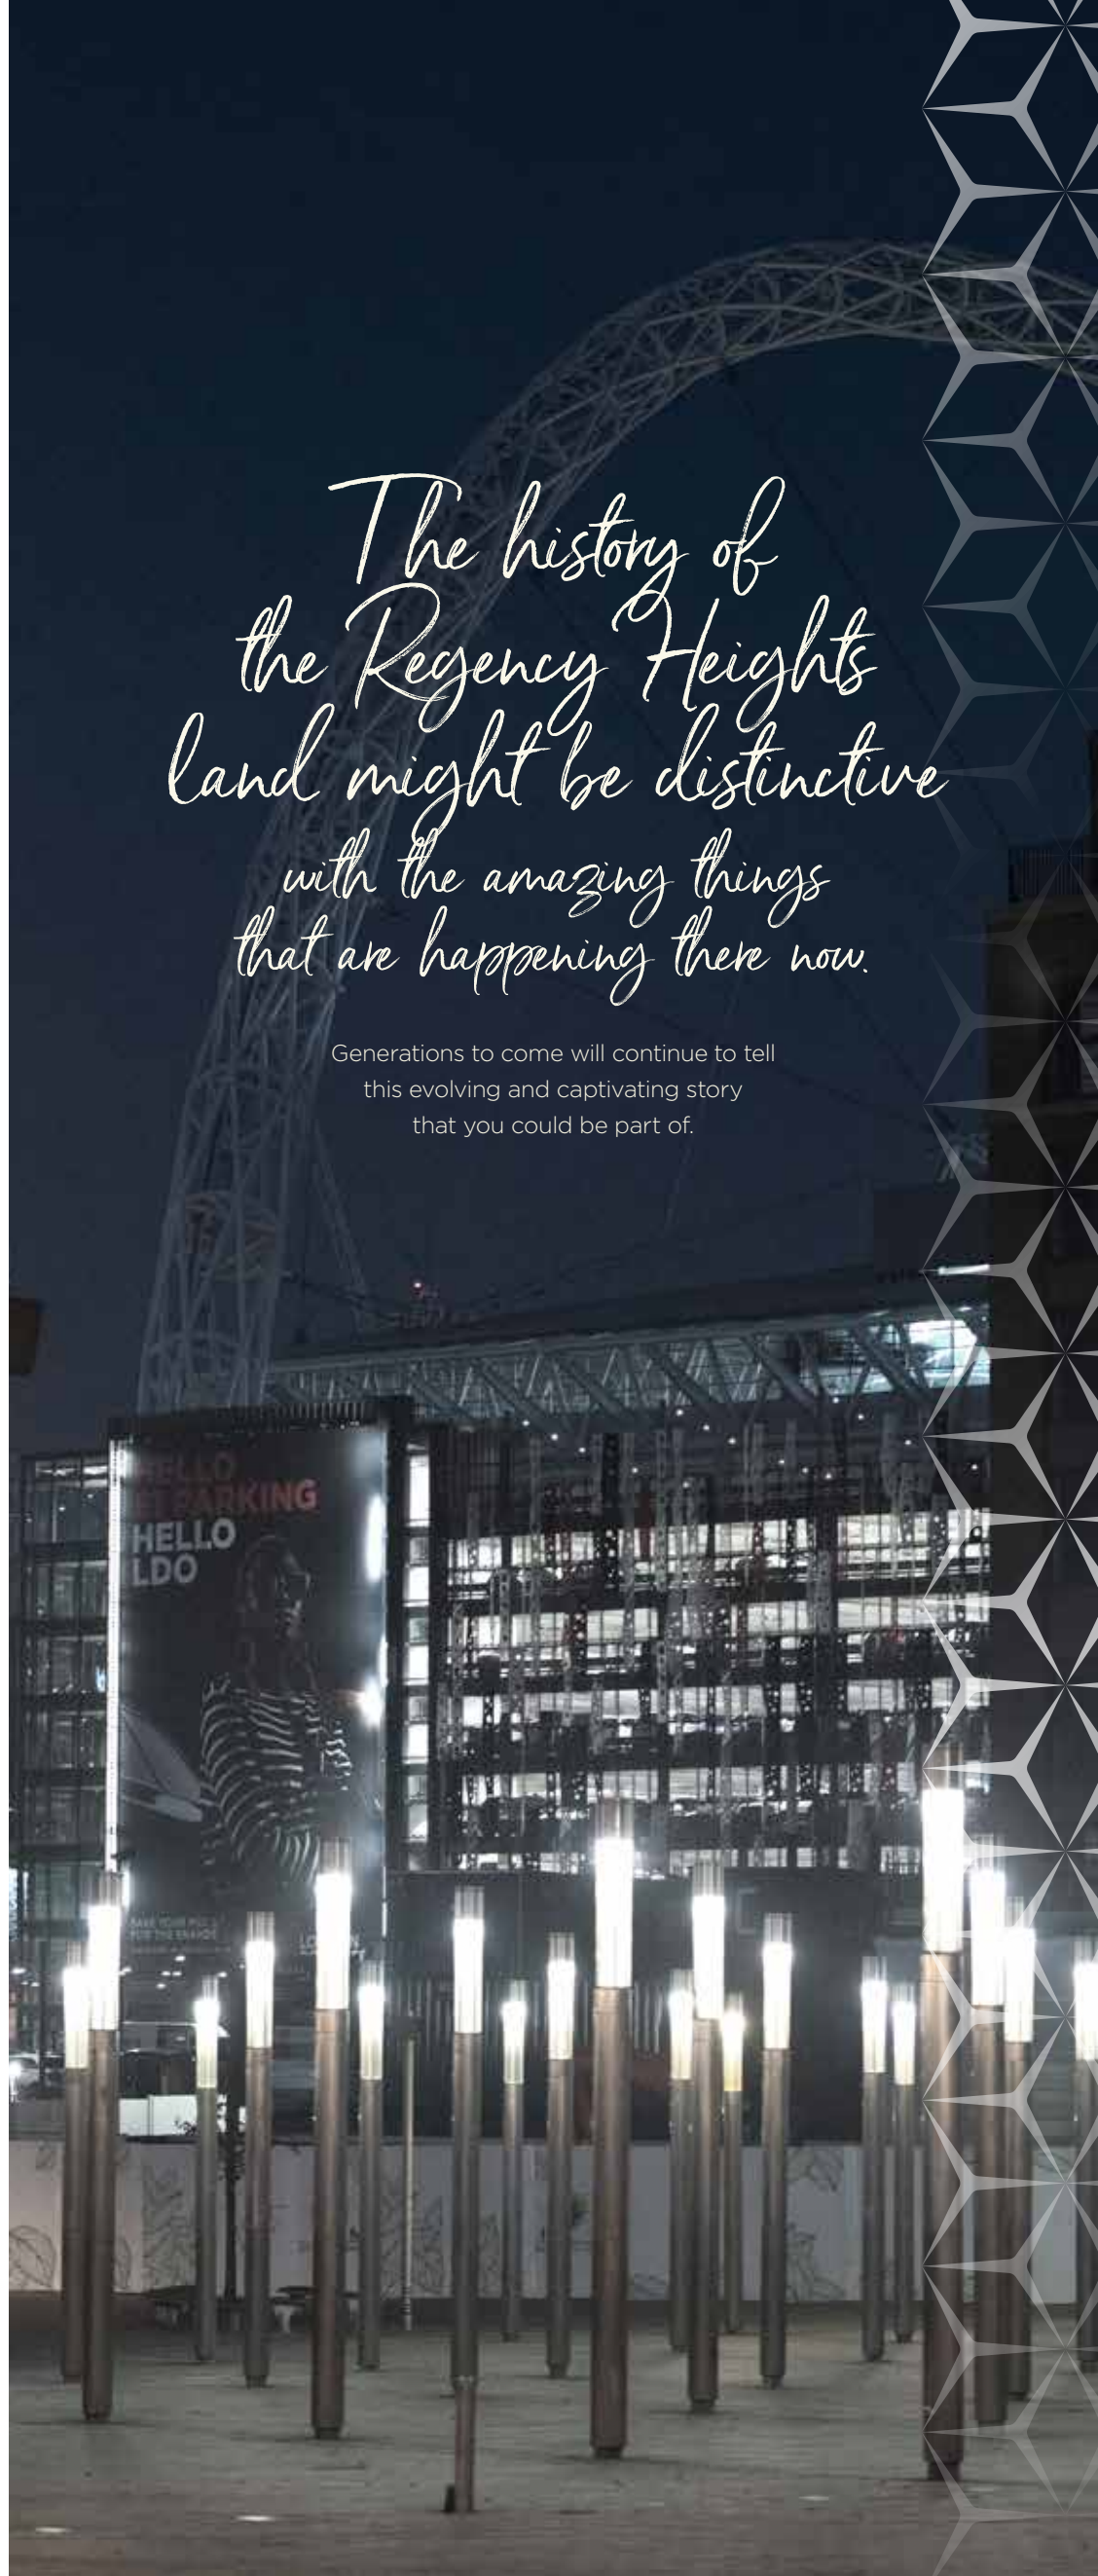

Looking towards central London

Turnham Green, Chiswick

The history of the Regency Heights land might be distinctive with the amazing things that are happening there now.

Generations to come will continue to tell this evolving and captivating story that you could be part of.

Regency Heights, Lakeside Drive, Park Royal, London NW10 7HQ

020 8023 8168

www.fairview.co.uk

Fairview[®]

PRESTIGE

L&Q